For His Invention Had Caused the World Lots of Trouble. His satanic majesty was in exceptionally good humor. Business had been excellent for some time, and he

CURES INSOMNIA.

Employer's Window.

Not far from Washington square, in Chicago, a man has been carning $1 a night in a novel way, and at the same time is breaking the ordinances which limit the use of water through garden hose. He begins work when the master of the house goes to bed, and remains on duty until he is convinced in his own mind that his employer has gone sound to sleep. The man is paid $1 a night to stand under his employer's window and play the stream from the hose on the window panes. His employer's friends say that he is such a great traveler that he cannot sleep unless he hears the swish of water under the port hole of his cabin, so that he is obliged to get up a substitute when on land, and that the nearest approach to this soothing swish is a slender stream of water moving over the window panes. The fact is, the man had discovered a cure for insomnia which is working gested to him one afternoon when he 000 head. was stretched on the sand at the edge of the lake. The monotonous break-A—Daily. B—Daily, except Saturday. C—Daily, except Monday.

The mesthetic Fran Von St-- had contrived to secure the leading hero in a well-known theater, and a great favorite with the ladies, as her companion at the supper table.
